

WESTERLY

Opening of the Schools Postponed to Sept. 18—Perley Gerald Brown Held, Charged With Attempted Break at Weekpaug Hotel—Band Outing at Brightman's Pond.

Douglas Fairbanks, celebrated legitimate actor, as well as one of the most daring of movie men, son-in-law of Daniel Sully of Watch Hill, is the star in the film play that is being made in and near Watch Hill. Monday night he entertained a Western audience, known almost to everyone present, by appearing in a local theatre, where one of his sensational pictures, where he was the real sensation, was being thrown on the screen. Mr. Fairbanks spoke interestingly on the making of moving pictures and showed his familiarity with local conditions by saying in substance: "Western is no pretty place and Watch Hill is elegant; but to ride in an automobile on the road between Westerly and Watch Hill is even more dangerous than any stunt ever attempted by the most daring of movie men."

This from Douglas Fairbanks, perhaps the most strenuous actor in the army of daring men who seemingly risk life to bring realism into the parts he plays so well in animated pictures, Douglas Fairbanks, who jumps from a cliff into an automobile, who treads with his heels on a wire, who jumps back on to the cliff, with the aid of a tree, and like a bow shot from an arrow.

During the past week at Watch Hill he jumped from a high ledge into a jumble of brush and actually tearing his clothing in extricate himself. Then, tired and in tattered clothes, with real blood flowing from real scratches, jumps upon the running board of a fast going automobile, clatters to the top, then jumps and catches a telephone wire and hangs there, while the automobile goes on. Then an organ grinder with a monkey comes along, and the organ grinder down and makes away with the monkey. This is only one of the many stunts of Douglas Fairbanks, yet he tells an audience, made up in the main of friends and acquaintances, that there is more danger in riding in an automobile on the road between Westerly and Watch Hill than in any stunt attempted by a movie actor.

As a precaution against the spread of infantile paralysis, the school committee has decided to postpone the opening until Sept. 18. The public playgrounds have been closed since there is general compliance with the request of Superintendent of Health Stanton to have all children remain at their homes. The health authorities advise that the disease is not contagious, but extreme precaution be taken in regard to the children and urge parents not to permit children to mingle with other children and for the present to limit the places for recreation to their own premises.

There are such drastic quarantine regulations in Norwich and New London, and in Stonington, too, strengthened since the disease appeared in Pawcatuck and Westerly, that the same quarantine is beneficial to Westerly. It prevents children from this place to visit infected sections and also prevents children from other places coming into Westerly, unless provided with a clean bill of health in every instance.

Perley Gerald Brown, an Indian half breed, who has intimate acquaintance with the Westerly police, out who has kept without their talk for many months, went on a warpath Monday night in the Weekpaug section. In response to a telephone call, Sergeant West went after Brown and brought him to a cell in the police station. Brown says he had been drinking to excess and went to the Rockaway house to call on a woman friend who was employed in the hotel kitchen. He could not get in by the back door route, so he tore a screen from a window under the veranda, to gain entrance that way, when he was interrupted and ordered from the hotel before he got away the police got him.

Perley's story did not tally with the story of the management of Rockaway and there was insistence that he had attempted to break and enter the hotel for the purpose of robbery, and that was the charge demanded by the complaining party. When arraigned in the Third district court, Brown pleaded not guilty. He was held for trial before the grand jury at the September term of the superior court for Washington county.

the greatest awe and wonder. To be able to view such phenomena in our own country with ease and safety is one of the striking merits of the Lassen Peak locality.

"Within easy reach of the mountain base of boiling lakes and springs, mud volcanoes, and other evidences of volcanic heat which appeal most strongly to the imagination of every visitor. By means of saddle horses the entire party also visited the remarkable Cinder Cone erupted a few hundred years ago and which is a short distance to the east of the main peak. From the base of this cone there spread out, like flows whose fresh, rugged surfaces give every appearance of having been erupted yesterday, and which are in reality less than a hundred years old. The opening in the case of the Cinder Cone from which the lava poured forth is still well preserved, and easily accessible to the visitor. The sides of the cone are easily climbed, and from the summit one may look down into a double crater as perfectly preserved and as symmetrical as though the eruption had just ceased.

"On all sides of the cone are the greyish white ash deposits, which descending upon the surrounding forest, burned and killed the trees, leaving the trunks still standing as monuments to the disaster which overtook them. Close by is Snake Lake, of particular interest to the tourist because he can plainly see the hole of the lava flow which recently dammed the valley to form the lake, while from the lake waters project the "snags" or trunks of trees drowned by the rising waters and not yet rotted away.

"On the whole it is difficult to imagine a region where the more striking phenomena of nature are developed on a grander scale or in a manner calculated to appeal more strongly to the average individual. The Lassen Peak is an exceptional feature that it has always justified special protection because of the natural wonders included in the area and the excellent camping sites which favor the summer visitor. The recent activity of this volcano has simply added to the wonders already existing in the district.

Lighten the lines of quarantine and until danger of the scourge reaching Plainville has been passed, people living in infected districts will have difficulty in coming to this town.

Suffrage League Organized.
The Stonington Women's Suffrage League has been organized. A special effort is being made to strengthen the membership and prepare to vote on the school question at the next election.

After visiting Judge and Mrs. Warrum A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. J. Powell have returned to their home in Cleveland, Ohio.

THE LASSEN VOLCANIC NATIONAL PARK.
Congress Has Just Made a National Park of the Only Active Volcano in the United States.

The Lassen Volcanic National Park, the bill creating which President Wilson has just signed, is California's fourth national park. Lassen Park, which showed volcanic activity only a few years ago, was set apart as a national monument in 1906. The park is in its immediate neighborhood was also thus distinguished at the same time. The new national park includes both of these remarkable volcanic monuments within its area of 22,880 acres.

The region is one of extraordinary interest and the only one in the United States exhibiting recent volcanic action. Among its features are Lassen Peak, 10,427 feet elevation and still exhibiting some volcanic activity; North Peak, 8,600 feet elevation; South Peak, over 9,200 feet elevation; Prospect Peak, over 9,200 feet elevation; Cinder Cone, 8,907 feet elevation; the Devil's Post Office showing hot springs and mud geysers; Rumpas, Morgan and other hot springs; seven lakes; and volcanic glass; numerous trout streams; and beautiful and majestic canyons. There are forests of yellow pine, fir, white pine, and lodgepole.

Professor Douglas W. Johnson of Columbia University has been on a recent visit to this great Pacific coast volcano.

"From the summit we had magnificent views of the Northern Sierras, the Cascades, the distant Coast ranges, and the mountains of the Great Basin. A panorama which for grandeur can be equalled at but few places in the country.

"The products of recent volcanic activity, the escaping steam and gases, the ruffled forests for miles to the eastward, marking the path of the latest blast which swept destruction before it, reminding one of the similar blast which destroyed San Pierre, Martinique all in one hour, the activities of that force of nature, which has always inspired man with

No More Back-Breaking Scuttles To Be Carried Up Those Cellar Stairs

If you buy coal in large quantities you must have room to store it; if in small quantities, it is expensive. When you want to use it you must carry it from its storage place to your range, and of all tasks that is one of the most weary.

When you burn wood or coal you have the heat, dirt, and the trouble of attending to the fire. If you use gas you require no room for storage; no back-breaking scuttles to be carried from the cellar to the kitchen. The fire in the gas range burns steadily and without attention; it is always ready, without dirt or trouble, in large or small quantities.
